

The city is the conduit between companies seeking finance and investors. Bankers construct the most appropriate product and sell it on to relevant funds and investors.

